Fantasy Author Brandon Mull Visits Montrose Regional Library, October 11

by Amy Dickinson,
Head of Teen Services

Imagine finding a book entitled “Journal of Secrets” with the words “Drink the milk” written within. Imagine you drink the milk, which leads to the discovery of magical preserves dedicated to saving mythical creatures from extinction. Imagine becoming the caretaker, with your sibling, of a sanctuary for dragons; or eating a candy called Moon Rocks that allows you to jump long distances; or traveling to Sambria, the world between wakefulness and dreaming.

The aforementioned fantastical adventures and worlds come from the mind of Brandon Mull, the bestselling author of more than twenty books. His series – Fablehaven, Dragonwatch, The Candy Shop War, The Five Kingdoms, and The Beyonders – are widely loved and wildly inventive. Since the inauguration of the Montrose Regional Library’s Teen(ish) Book Club, readers have proposed his books as selections regularly. When we inquired with teen readers about authors they would love to meet or host here in Montrose, Brandon Mull topped the list.

Lucky for us, Brandon Mull lives only one state away, in Utah. Luckier for us, Brandon Mull is incredibly engaged with his fans and visits dozens of schools and towns every year. Luckiest for us, our library is supported by the active, dedicated, and extremely hardworking Friends of the Montrose Library, who regularly sponsor amazing programs and resources, like community fairs, literary magazines, a book bicycle, and author visits.

On Wednesday, October 11, the Montrose Regional Library will host Brandon Mull in an evening author talk, Q&A, and signing for the general public. More details on the time will be announced on our website and social media as the date nears, and please remember that space will be limited in the library’s meeting room. The event is supported by both the Friends of the Montrose Library and Writers & Artists Across the Country, a consortium of children’s book industry professionals who are building a nationwide network to facilitate author and artist visits in K-12 schools and libraries who, by dint of geography or resources, might not have easy access to such opportunities.

Readers will have the chance to meet the author, ask him their most burning questions, and request books be signed. In my experience, author visits can open windows onto worlds young people never dreamed of, whether that be the world of a book or the world of a future as an author, publisher, editor, or creator. There are few better authors than Brandon Mull to demonstrate the possibilities of living out those dreams: he wrote and dreamed up stories through school and multiple jobs, as a comedian, piano installer, movie promoter, and marketing copywriter, before publishing Fablehaven, his first published novel and an almost immediate hit. Yet, as unlikely and cinematic as such a debut seems, Mull’s trajectory also shows young people and aspiring authors the value of resilience and continued hard work: while his first published novel was a hit, his first submitted novel was rejected by a variety of publishers. He eventually reworked and rewrote that novel, which became The Beyonders series.

So, we hope young people – whether they consider themselves die-hard fans of Brandon Mull’s works or are simply curious about the work of an author and the possibilities of imagination – will join us for a wonder-inspiring visit on the evening of October 11.

Celebrating Anniversaries

By Addy Robinson,
Youth and Teen Collections Librarian

It's been an exciting and monumental year with anniversary celebrations at the library! At the end-of-summer reading party, most notably known as the Unity Fair, we celebrated our 25th anniversary with pizza, snow cones, and camaraderie. We saw so many new and old faces! It filled this newbie's heart with admiration and community.

But the celebration did not stop there! In August, we celebrated two milestones: Mary Paladino has worked 30 years at the library in various departments, while Amy Flowers has worked 20 years in CORPS (cataloging, ordering, receiving, processing services). I had the honor of interviewing these two wonderful humans and got the inside scoop on their journeys into librarianship, favorite moments, and more!

Addy: How did you begin your journey in librarianship?

Mary: I spent my childhood in libraries. I was fortunate to have a library where I grew up in Ohio. My family often visited the library, where we had to drag my dad out at closing time! I wanted to continue the essential work of a public library, providing for the greater good in a community. After college I started working in circulation, interlibrary loan, cataloging and processing in public libraries. I have worked in five institutions over 34 years.

Amy: As part of my homeschooling, I started volunteering at MRLD in 1998. I learned a variety of things – shelving, shelf reading, processing new items, and helping with Children's and YA programs. Even after I was hired, I continued to volunteer. I was hired in Circulation in 2002 and worked there for 6 years. I checked items in/out, shelved, shelf read, managed library's scrapbooks and display cases, made book review brochures and bookmarks, and participated in the Book Cart Drill Team. After several years, I decided I really wanted to work in CORPS. As soon as a position became available, I applied. I was super excited to get hired! Currently, I work as the Acquisitions Specialist.

Addy: What led you to the vast and complex world of CORPS?

Mary: My various positions in the library introduced me to the vital skill of cataloging. Catalogers create bibliographic records, entries representing specific items in a library catalog that has the data that allows searching by author, title, subject, or keyword.

Amy: When I volunteered in Children's, I was lucky to have a supervisor who let me try everything! She had experience with cataloging and introduced me to the subject, encouraging me to learn more. It was the best experience ever; by volunteering with such awesome people, I got to try different things and discover what branch of librarianship I truly wanted to work in.

Mary: I am proud of how the district has grown in the past 30 years. The great community support for building the current library 25 years ago, is a highlight of my memories.

Amy: I don't have just one. I would say volunteering in Children's is among my best memories. I was constantly having fun but learning so much. If I went back in time, I would definitely choose to do it again!

Addy: What would you like people to know about the profession of librarianship?

Mary: We are trained and educated information and literacy professionals. MRLD has 10 employees with Masters of Library and Information Science. Librarians care deeply for the communities they work in and defend the availability of knowledge for all.

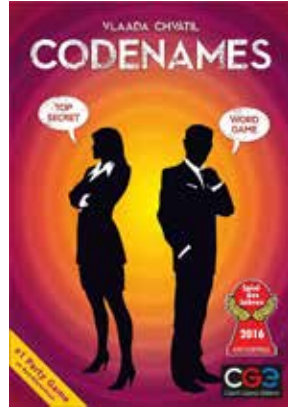

Amy: Librarianship is a very diverse profession. Librarians are hired by law offices, museums, the military, movie and TV studios, book vendors, and more! Even in a school or public library there are many jobs – programming, managing computer systems, ordering books, social media, reviewing books, and supporting the community in a variety of ways.

Addy: Lastly, what are you currently reading?

Mary: Hello Beautiful by Ann Napolitano.

Amy: The Witch King by Martha Wells

The Adult Services Department Unveils: The Library of Things

by Laura McLean,
Adult Services Librarian

Merriam-Webster defines a library as: a collection in which materials are kept for use but not for sale.

Many of us still may envision the library as a quiet place filled with endless rows of books on just about everything under the sun. While we at the Montrose Regional Library still work tirelessly to curate an inclusive collection and have several rooms and spaces available for those wishing a quiet area to read or study, our collection has expanded way beyond traditional books. Surely you've noticed the DVDs, CDs, and magazines that can be checked out. Perhaps you've downloaded an eBook or eAudiobook using the Libby app or streamed a movie using Kanopy. But...did you know that you can also check out items such as a sewing machine, stand mixer or a metal detector from your library? It's true! The Youth Services department has long had a multitude of kits including a telescope kit, video games, STEAM activities, and so much more for children and families to check out, but now the Adult Services department has joined the craze! Behind the scenes over the past year or so, we have been carefully selecting and purchasing items that we think the community would like to borrow. Maybe something that would be handy to have but not something one would use every day to justify the expense, or perhaps something to entice you to get into the Great Outdoors. The collection, fittingly called The Library of Things, is just in the beginning stages but already includes: a Singer sewing machine, a Kitchen Aid stand mixer, a disc golf set, a tool kit, a metal detector, and more items that you'll have to come see for yourself. Additionally, check out our wonderful video game library with titles appealing to teens and adults alike across several of the popular consoles. I almost forgot, we also have a totally awesome selection of National Geographic maps of popular hiking areas that can be checked out should you want to plot your course to summit a 14er. Truly, there's something for everyone in The Library of Things!

You may be asking, "How do I know what items the library has for me to borrow?" The answer is that you can come over by the Reference Desk to the area where the Library of Things and video game collection binders live to browse both collections. Once you find an item you'd like to borrow, simply take the tag in the binder to the Reference Desk and we will assist you in getting the item(s) checked out.

It is our ultimate goal to have a special section of our website designated for the Library of Things, making finding out what is available even easier! It's a work in progress.

Items in the Library of Things circulate for one week and do require a liability waiver to be signed. The waiver can be found on our website by clicking on the "Adults" tab and then selecting "Library of Things". We are also happy to print off a paper copy of the waiver for you, if that is more convenient, just ask any staff member at the Reference Desk. Certain items require the borrower to either be 18+ years old or have an adult with them. Small items can be returned to the book drops while we ask that bigger items such as our tool kits and sewing machine be returned to the Ask Here Desk.

Have a creative idea for a new Library of Things item? We'd love to hear your suggestions! You can come talk to us at the Reference Desk, give us a call at 970-249-9656 x3, send a suggestion via our website, or send us an email at refdesk@montroselibrary.org. Check the binders regularly as our collection continues to grow! We are excited to bring a wide variety of unusual items to our community for check out.

Ongoing Library Services

by Taylor Evans, Adult Services Librarian

This library continues to offer many useful services to the public. This includes a wide variety of virtual resources, in-person services at the library, and items we can deliver directly to you home.

There are many research tools available on our website, which are all selected to appeal to different interests and needs. I have only listed a few of those resources in this article. The Wall Street Journal and The New York Times provide the latest news. Students in several fields can take advantage of tools such as EasyBib, which can be useful for writing essays, and numerous research databases. We also have databases that appeal to general interests including HeritageQuest Online, for genealogical research, Mango Languages, and Universal Class, which includes a wide variety of courses.

There are many digital materials available to supplement our collection. You can check out eBooks, eAudiobooks, and even eMagazines on Overdrive and Libby, with the use of your library card and Marmot password. That includes materials for children, teens, adults, and a Spanish collection serving the same age ranges. The magazines include a number of popular titles such as People, Magnolia, Men's Health and more. Kanopy features many movies and TV shows you can access with your library card, including programs for children and adults.

We offer more in-person services than I could include in this article. Here are a couple of examples. The Adult Services Department proctors exams, offers hour-long librarian sessions for one-on-one assistance, and conducts research on a wide variety of questions. Those requests may include genealogical research, archival research, and various other inquiries. The Youth Services and Adult Services departments both provide library tours to any groups who would like more information about the library. A number of my coworkers can help you renew or register for a U.S. passport.

Visit the library's website, or ask a friendly librarian for more information on any of the services we offer. We are always happy to serve this community!

TAB is a good way to accumulate volunteer hours, beef up your resume, and meet other bookish teens. Attendance at all meetings is not mandatory – come to as many as you can.

Text Amy D at 970-275-9383 or email adickinson@montroselibrary.org for info on how to join.

Welcome Jacob Wilson, New Teen Services Librarian

by Amy Dickinson, Head of Teen Services

You may have noticed a new person in Teen Services and at the library's Reference Desk, or even seen him cruising downtown on the Book Bicycle. In July, we were (and are) thrilled to welcome Jacob Wilson, a long-time Montrosian, former teacher, father, world traveler, and all-around explorer. If you have yet to meet him in person, read on to meet him in print!

Amy: Tell us a bit about your background and your history in Montrose.

Jacob: I'm a local Montrose boy. Born and raised. Graduated MHS class of 1997. I like to tell people I took my retirement at the beginning of my life because starting in 1999 until 2014 I lived out of a backpack and hitchhiked around the Caribbean and Atlantic Ocean on sailboats working as a scuba divemaster, organic farmer, and chef.

I came back to Montrose in 2017 – multilingual with a BA in writing, an MA in Education, the ability to navigate a boat by the stars, a passion for good, home-grown food, and a desire to be of service – to give back to my hometown.

Amy: Why were you interested in joining the Montrose Library, and why were you interested in working in Teen Services specifically?

Jacob: I was a student of the library, which is to say that the public library

(and public libraries everywhere) have been an important part of my life for as long as I can remember.

When I was in high school, way back in the 90s, one of my favorite things to do after school was to get a giant Styrofoam cup of Jasmine tea from the Chinese restaurant and find a comfy place at the library to read or journal.

As a young man the library provided structure and meaning to my existence, and it was the safest place to practice being an introvert. After many years of practice I've finally nailed it. But I've also learned to conserve my energy so I can be of service to others.

I believe a life of service to others is the only life worth living, and being a teacher taught me that teens are one of the most marginalized and misunderstood groups in our society, so that is where I choose to serve. It's an honor, really.

Amy: As a long-time Montrose resident, what do you like most or what do you find special about the Montrose community?

Jacob: My favorite part of Montrose is the Cerise and Riverbottom Park Complex. I've watched the city develop that piece of land from an abandoned old ranch into the wonderfully diverse recreational space it is today. I walk my dogs on the river path every morning and it keeps me connected with the natural beauty of Colorado. Every season is a different color of beautiful. Often I will go back to the park after work with my toddler and a picnic dinner.

Amy: How would you compare teaching, thus far, to librarianship?

Jacob: Working for the Montrose Regional Library District is like getting to do all the fun things of teaching – the programming, being of service, the joy of discovery and creativity – but without all the stress and chaos of being a teacher. It's a great feeling to be part of such a positive team and I'm proud to embrace my bookish, nerdy nature.

Amy: Lastly, what are you currently reading?

Jacob: Nonfiction: Simplicity Parenting by Kim John Payne

Fiction: Six of Crows by Leigh Bardugo

Philosophy: Meditations by Marcus Aurelius
